1.9 What do you do?

Read this article about a national holiday in Canada and the United States of America

What is Labour Day?

Labour is another word that means work. It's a national holiday that celebrates workers and takes place on the first Monday of September for Canadians and Americans. Schools and businesses are closed.

It is a holiday that began in Toronto, Canada during the labour movement in 1872. Workers were asking for better work conditions. This labour union movement favoured the 8 hours for work, 8 hours for recreation, and 8 hours for rest. This national holiday is more than time off work and school. It's a day to celebrate the important contributions that working people make to our economy.

Many people see Labour Day as the end of summer vacation and the start of a new school year. Canadians and Americans celebrate this day with parties, barbecues and fireworks.
